Manager's Investment Report

Phillip Money Market Fund

For the half year ended 30 June 2024, the Fund generated a net return of 1.65% and 3.33% for the 6-month and 1-year period, respectively. The Fund outperformed the bank savings deposit rate of 0.46% over the same 6-month period.

As of 30 June 2024, the portfolio's Weighted Average Maturity ("WAM") stood at 67 days, compared with 78 days in the previous year. During the first half of 2024, rates markets were volatile amid easing inflation expectations and a slowing global growth outlook, with the yield curve remaining inverted and front-end rates elevated. The Fund maintained sufficient liquidity, achieved through short-term deposit placements and short-term bond issues, where the Fund benefited from higher short-term yields. The Fund was primarily invested in high-quality issuers within the Asian region and placed deposits with high-quality bank counterparties.

As of June 2024, the SGD Singapore Overnight Rate Average ("SORA") for one month was 3.67%, up from 3.65%, and for three months, 3.64%, lower than 3.71% from the end of the previous year.

Based on advance-estimate economic data released by the Ministry of Trade and Industry ("MTI") in mid-July 2024, the Singapore economy expanded by 2.9% year-on-year ("YoY") for the second quarter of 2024, accelerating further from the 1.1% YoY expansion recorded for the previous quarter. Economic expansion was driven by broad-based sources such as manufacturing, construction, and services, up 0.5%, 4.3%, and 3.3%, respectively. The services sector saw broad-based growth across the various sub-sectors. Construction also saw better construction activity volumes within public projects, although we also observed a decline in private-sector construction output. Manufacturing expanded overall as expansions within all clusters, except biomedical manufacturing and precision engineering.

The Monetary Authority of Singapore's ("MAS") core inflation measure came in at 2.9% YoY for June 2024, decelerating from 3.1% in May 2024, mainly driven by declines in retail and services. Headline consumer prices decreased to 2.4% compared to 3.1% in the previous month, driven by the lower core inflation print and private transportation costs. The MAS has also left the SGD Nominal Effective Exchange Rate ("SGD NEER") unchanged during its most recent July 2024 Monetary Policy Statement in light of the softening growth outlook and expectations that the impact from previous rounds of policy tightening will continue to dampen inflationary pressures.

Outlook

According to the MTI's announcement in July 2024, Singapore's economic growth outlook 2024 is expected to be within the 1.0% to 3.0% range. Prospects will be more muted over the near term before gradually picking up in 2H2024 as the loosening of monetary policy stimulates better consumption, a recovery in global electronics demand, and the sustained post-pandemic recovery in air travel and tourism.

With the MAS having committed itself to five policy tightening moves since October 2021, the central bank indicated during its Monetary Policy Statement in July 2024 belief that the existing monetary policy is sufficiently restrictive to achieve medium-term price stability. With Singapore's growth outlook benefiting from more broad-based drivers, abating domestic costs, the slowdown in imported inflation, and expectations for a deceleration in inflation starting from 4Q2024, the MAS deemed the existing policy stance sufficient to ensure medium-term price stability. Amid global energy prices being off their April 2024 peak, stable commodities prices, and a slowdown in domestic labor costs, upside and downside risks to the inflation outlook have become better balanced. As such, the MAS has trimmed its full-year forecast for headline inflation to 2.0% to 3.0% while maintaining its expectations for core inflation to be 2.5% to 3.5%.

We expect short-term interest rates to trend lower from the current level while observing the US Federal Reserve require policy rates to be more restrictive as slowing signs of economic activities in recent months. Credit fundamentals are still healthy among high-quality Singapore sovereign, Asian corporate bond issuers, and bank counterparties while offering an attractive yield level.

Manager's Investment Report

Sustainable Reserve Fund

For the half year ended June 30, 2024, the Sustainable Reserve Fund (SRF) generated a net return of 2.15% and outperformed its benchmark, the 6-month compounded Singapore Overnight Rate Average ("SORA"), which returned 1.25%. Since inception, the fund has returned 2.63%, which also beat the benchmark's 1.66% return.

During the same period, the SRF's returns showed resilience, with a diverse range of contributors. The improving credit fundamentals of bonds issuances and term structure of bank perpetual were one of the factors, as were the total return gains from allocation in 3-5 years of maturity bonds in the portfolio, high coupon carry of front-end short-term bonds, and foreign currency appreciation.

Market Review

The first half of 2024 was marked by significant and unexpected developments in the global financial landscape, the divergence in monetary policies among major economies and the complex interplay of growth, inflation, and interest rates in shaping the global economic outlook for 2024.

China's slowing recovery has had ripple effects across global markets. As the world's second-largest economy. China's slower growth has likely impacted global demand, particularly in commodities and exports, affecting countries and industries dependent on Chinese consumption.

The surge in US Treasury yields to levels not seen in 16 years suggests heightened concerns about inflation and the potential for sustained higher interest rates. This environment has likely pressured borrowing costs and weighed on interest-rate-sensitive sectors while offering higher yields for fixed-income investors.

The SNB's decision to cut its policy rate in early 2024, diverging from other major central banks, marks a significant shift. This move may reflect concerns about deflationary pressures or the strength of the Swiss franc, as the SNB aims to support economic growth and prevent excessive currency appreciation.

The BoJ's historic decision to end its negative interest rate policy and abandon yield-curve control marks a major turning point in its monetary policy. This shift reflects the BoJ's growing confidence in Japan's economic recovery and desire to normalize monetary policy after years of ultra-loose conditions. The move will likely have wide-ranging implications, particularly for global bond markets and the Japanese yen.

Outlook & strategy

In early August 2024, the global economic growth outlook appeared lackluster, while there were increasing risks of a slowdown in the US economy. A key macroeconomic indicator, the US treasuries yield spread between the US 2-year and 10-year yields, which is in inversion, is now on the cusp of "un-inverting," which historically has served as a highly reliable predictor of an impending recession. The US labor market is also weak, with the unemployment rate ticking from 3.3% in April to 4.1% in July. This comes from policy easing cycles from global central banks and the FED, which has indicated that rate cuts are likely by September or even sooner. BOJ delivers rate hikes, signals that the tapering of the bond purchase program and slowing of China's recovery were causing market volatility, as characterized by the VIX index, which is also at its most elevated level year-to-date.

Given the rising recession risks, heightened market volatility and bear-steepening yield curve (where long-term rates rise faster than short-term rates), our approach is to maintaining a defensive positioning amid the interplay between interest rates divergence and slower growth aligns with a prudent investment strategy. We will be gradual extension of portfolio duration, as when the benchmark yield curve normalised. At the same time, focusing on quality credits—especially those in defensive sectors with leading market shares and systemic importance —can help mitigate risks, while still capturing value in a still high interest rate environment.
