Manager's Investment Report

Phillip Money Market Fund

For the half year ended 30 June 2026, the Fund generated a net return of 0.45% and 1.10% for the 6-month and 1-year period, respectively. The Fund outperformed the bank savings deposit rate of 0.25% over the same 6-month period.

As of 30 June 2026, the portfolio's Weighted Average Maturity ("WAM") stood at 79 days, compared with 45 days in the previous year. The front end now slopes gently upward from 6-months into 1 year, the curve has gone from "elevated and inverted in 2024" to "low and normal-sloping" at the short end. During the first half of 2026, rate markets were volatile as the outbreak of the US-Israel-Iran conflict disrupted global energy supplies and raised concerns that elevated energy prices will exert upward pressure on global inflation therefore denting global economic activities. The Fund maintained sufficient liquidity, achieved through short-term deposit placements and short-term bond issues, where the Fund benefited from high short-term yields. The Fund was primarily invested in high-quality issuers within the Asian region and placed deposits with high-quality bank counterparties.

As of June 2026, the SGD Singapore Overnight Rate Average ("SORA") for one month was 1.09%, and similarly, the SGD SORA for three months was 1.08% respectively. The front-end yields dipped into March 2026 and then edged modestly higher into June, its form a small partial reversal rather than continued declines since 2024.

Based on economic data released by the Ministry of Trade and Industry ("MTI") in mid-August 2026, the Singapore economy expanded by 5.9% year-on-year ("YoY") for the second quarter of 2026, accelerating from 5.4% YoY growth recorded for the previous year. Economic expansion was driven by broad-based sources such as manufacturing, construction, and services, up 12.5%, 5.8%, and 4.9% respectively. Manufacturing expanded overall, boosted by strong output from the electronics and precision engineering clusters stemming from strong regional AI-related demand. Construction also saw better construction activity volumes within private and public projects. Services sector also saw broad-based growth supported by higher output from the wholesale trade and the finance & insurance segment, even as some weakness was observed in the food & beverages segment.

The Monetary Authority of Singapore's ("MAS") core inflation measure came in at 1.6% YoY for June 2026, accelerating from 1.4% in May 2026 due to higher prices in food, services and retail goods. Headline consumer prices increased to 1.9% compared to 1.8% in the previous month, as higher accommodation costs reinforced the higher core inflation. The MAS has also steepened the slope of the SGD Nominal Effective Exchange Rate ("SGD NEER") during the most recent July 2026 Monetary Policy Statement for the second time in 2026, while implementing no changes to both level and width of the policy band.

Outlook

According to the MTI's announcement in August 2026, Singapore's economic growth outlook for 2026 had been revised higher to be between the 4.5% to 5.5% range, compared to the previous guidance of 2.0% to 4.0% range provided in May 2026. Singapore is expected to benefit from positive growth momentum linked to the AI-related capital expenditure which enabled them to mitigate the downside growth risks coming from the Middle East conflict.

The MAS indicated during its Monetary Policy Statement in July 2026 that the adjusted monetary policy stance is sufficient in ensuring medium-term price stability with the previous round of policy tightening enacted in April 2026 also contributing towards controlling inflationary developments. However, they did acknowledge that external price pressures are likely to lead to inflation staying elevated for the remainder of the year before moderating starting from mid-2027. Full-year forecast for both headline and core inflation has been revised upwards to 1.5% to 2.5% for 2026.

Phillip Investment Funds

The last two to three quarters show yields stabilizing and even ticking up slightly rather than falling further. We expect short-term interest rates increase from current level boosted by the MAS recent rounds of monetary policy tightening and expectation of US Federal Reserve for policy action given the degree of uncertainty regarding the inflationary outlook given elevated global energy prices. Credit fundamentals are still healthy among high-quality Singapore sovereign, Asian corporate bond issuers, and bank counterparties while offering an attractive yield level.

Sustainable Reserve Fund

The Fund generated a net return of 0.81% for the six-month period ended 30 June 2026, outperforming its benchmark, the 6-month compounded Singapore Overnight Rate Average ("SORA"), which returned 0.39% over the same period.

The Fund has continued to deliver favourable long-term outcomes for investors. Since inception, it has generated an annualised return of 3.48%, compared to 1.84% for its benchmark, underscoring its role as a capital-preserving strategy that seeks to provide returns above money market rates through market cycles.

As of 30 June 2026, the portfolio's weighted average duration stood at 3.29 years compared to 2.22 years during the same period last year.

Market Review

The first half of 2026 was characterised by heightened geopolitical uncertainty and shifting expectations around the path of global interest rates. The war in Iran, together with concerns over potential disruptions to energy supplies through the Strait of Hormuz, contributed to a sharp rise in oil prices and renewed inflationary pressures across major economies. Against this backdrop, bond markets experienced bouts of volatility as investors reassessed the timing and extent of future monetary policy easing. Central banks responded differently to these developments, with the European Central Bank and Bank of Japan raising interest rates while the US Federal Reserve maintained its policy rate, contributing to greater divergence across global fixed income markets.

In global bond markets, investor sentiment remained sensitive to changes in inflation expectations and policy guidance. The appointment of Kevin Warsh as Chair of the Federal Reserve introduced an additional source of uncertainty, as investors adapted to a more hawkish communication approach and a reduced reliance on forward guidance. This contributed to heightened volatility in both government bond yields and expectations for future rate cuts. Meanwhile, the rapid expansion of AI-related investment remained a dominant market theme, with growing scrutiny of hyperscaler capital expenditure plans shaping views on economic growth, corporate issuance and future funding requirements. Against this backdrop, concerns over higher-for-longer interest rates kept duration volatility elevated, while resilient credit fundamentals and the continued appeal of carry helped support broader fixed income markets.

In Singapore, economic activity remained resilient despite a challenging external environment. Growth continued to be supported by robust activity in technology-related sectors and sustained investment linked to the global AI buildout, reinforcing Singapore's position as a regional hub for digital infrastructure and advanced manufacturing. The Monetary Authority of Singapore maintained a measured policy stance during the period, helping to preserve stability in domestic financial conditions. While Singapore bonds did not match the returns delivered by some higher-carry segments of the global fixed income market, the asset class continued to benefit from strong sovereign fundamentals, healthy corporate balance sheets and its defensive characteristics, underpinning demand for high-quality SGD credit.

Market Outlook and Strategy

As the second half of 2026 unfolds, the outlook for global fixed income markets remains balanced but uncertain. While geopolitical developments and evolving energy market dynamics continue to pose upside risks to inflation, investors are also navigating a rapidly changing policy landscape following the appointment of Kevin Warsh as Chair of the US Federal Reserve. At the same time, the sustainability of the global AI investment cycle is coming under increasing scrutiny, particularly as hyperscalers commit substantial capital towards data centres and related infrastructure. Together, these developments suggest that volatility is likely to remain elevated across rates and credit markets, creating both challenges and opportunities for fixed income investors in the months ahead.

In Singapore, the outlook remains relatively constructive despite a more uncertain global backdrop. Although downside risks have increased amid ongoing geopolitical uncertainty, MTI has maintained its 2026 GDP growth forecast at 2.0% to 4.0%, suggesting that Singapore remains relatively well-positioned to navigate external headwinds compared to many of its developed market peers. Against this backdrop, the Monetary Authority of Singapore is expected to maintain a measured policy approach, balancing inflation risks against the need to support economic growth. While expectations for a significant decline in domestic interest rates have moderated, Singapore dollar funding rates are likely to remain relatively stable, with some market participants anticipating a modest upward drift should global inflationary pressures prove more persistent than expected.
